Happy New Year 2004

Another year is gone and in its place – A MUCH BETTER YEAR! NEW AND IMPROVED! The year 2003 was both good and bad for me as I expect it was for all of you. I'm an optimistic person to a fault and I really believe that 2004 is going to be a really great year!

I'm looking forward to seeing my darling Raluca very soon and work on getting her to the United States so we can finally be together for good. We're very addicted to each other and even though it's tough to be so far apart, we're managing it really well. We're in constant communication all the time – even when we're sleeping! Heheheh.

I wish you all an amazing year full of kickass shit.

Christmas in Rocklin aka "Uh, These Boys Are Too Big"

I spent Christmas with my parents and my boys Michael and Steven, up in Rocklin, CA (northeast of Sacramento off I-80). So, uh, yeah – as you can see….they're big. They're both football players and serious gamers. I didn't want to anger them.

We spent many hours at an awesome LAN gaming place in Rocklin called Arena 1337. They had about 40 computers in the totally dark, long retail space – it was sooo great. Lots of hot games installed and we could scream and pound the tables as much as we wanted! Heh. My friend Robert and his girlfriend Debbie joined us and we deathmatched one day for 10 hours straight!

Red Faction #1 on N-Gage!

Well, all our hard work paid off – the top 5 N-Gage games list came out and Red Faction was right there on top! YEAH! It's been a long time since I've had a #1 game. And it debuted on the list at number one.

Chompie #2!

While in Rocklin for Christmas, I ran across the most adorable little doggie – and he looks exactly like my dog Chompie (which Stevie now has)! The owners of this little guy, named Joey, say that he's a Toy Terrier. It's almost unbelieveable how Joey looks almost 100% like Chompie.
